

6 quick and easy ideas to build on your culture of R4P across the school community. Try one each week.

Have a chat about books and reading with a pupil in the playground.

Keep a book that you are reading on your desk so that pupils can see it and comment on it.

Visit the school library once a week and spend 20 minutes browsing the shelves.

Recommend a book to a pupil or ask a pupil for a recommendation.

Have a chat with another adult during the school day about what you are reading.

Have an 'I am reading' poster up in your classroom or on your office door.

If we want to nurture readers for life, it is essential we position ourselves as fellow readers and seize informal opportunities to engage in significant 'book blether'.
(Professor Theresa Cremin)

6 quick and easy ideas to build on your culture of R4P across the school community. Try one each week.

Have a chat about books and reading with a pupil in the playground.

Keep a book that you are reading on your desk so that pupils can see it and comment on it.

Visit the school library once a week and spend 20 minutes browsing the shelves.

Recommend a book to a pupil or ask a pupil for a recommendation.

Have a chat with another adult during the school day about what you are reading.

Have an 'I am reading' poster up in your classroom or on your office door.

If we want to nurture readers for life, it is essential we position ourselves as fellow readers and seize informal opportunities to engage in significant 'book blether'.
(Professor Theresa Cremin)